Our Views on HR

We believe that people make the brand, and constant training and development is essential to making the brand relevant and competitive. In particular, we are fond of finding young talents who have a hunger to learn and have the ability to contribute fresh ideas, especially in an industry where trends and practices are always changing and creativity is crucial.

We engage our young talents in a comprehensive programme by allowing them to try different areas/types of work so that they can find their interests and strengths, and expand their knowledge and experiences. We believe that our staff will also learn to appreciate what everyone else is doing and feel more involved in the company if they themselves have been involved in various aspects of the business. We also hone their soft skills by giving them opportunities to lead small projects. Through such empowering and positive experiences, we hope that our interns will enjoy their internship and some of them will join us as full time staff.

We are delighted to be able to tap into government platforms and grants (namely the GRT programme) to help us find local talents from the local polytechnics and universities. The grants/subsidies helped to defray our expenses incurred for such internships and allow us to give a higher allowance to the students.

Student's Feedback

The internship had given me exposure to real working world. I am happy that I am able to contribute to the organisation and proud to be part of the team. It broaden my horizon in the retail sector and am inspired to be part of it.

Collaborations with IHLs

We have worked with IHLs to tailor a clear training and development plan as part of our internship programme to make sure that the interns' experience will be relevant, educational and beneficial to their course of study and future work. Throughout the internship, we communicate regularly with the IHLs' student coordinators to monitor and evaluate the students' internship performance.
